

Nurture and well-being

All staff are familiar with the principles set out by The United Nations Convention On The Rights Of The Child.

Each member of staff working within Once Upon A Time Nursery has been carefully selected to care for each child with commitment and love, offering a Key Worker system with a member of staff being assigned to each child in the beginning. This helps babies/toddlers form attachments to a key person.

We would like children to visit the nursery several times prior to their start date. The aim of settling in sessions is to help the child become familiar with the nursery, the staff and the routines of the day. It is also a way of helping the parent/carer to feel comfortable with leaving their child at nursery.

Qualified and experienced staff are responsible for small groups of children, each group ensures every child is happy and enjoys the varied activities throughout the day. Children are supported and listened to, and staff are encouraged to maintain eye contact at the child's level.

Photos of children enjoying a wide selection of activities whilst at nursery are displayed on our windows and doors for parents/carers to see and on the Family App.
